Ace the SAT Essay: How to Master the Timed Writing Process Dana L. Lebo
As a successful psychologist and writing teacher, Dana Lebo observed that students who write effective essays achieve insight during the writing process. And it is this moment of insight a special form of seeing that enables them to write in the zone. Ace the SAT Essay will empower students to produce an above-average essay. Unlike other texts on writing or SAT preparation, this book will show young people how an understanding of psychology can enhance how they write and what they say. Through the story of Jamie, a high school student who must take the writing test again after her poor performance on it the first time around, readers will explore ideas and strategies to manage anxiety and create an effective and insightful essay. Whatever the reader s present level of proficiency at writing may be, the overall aim of this book is to raise it. If students read with an open heart and mind, adapt the suggested strategies to their personal learning styles and interests, and tackle for a few minutes each day the recommended exercises at the end of each chapter readers should experience marked improvements in what and how they write. In fact, each might gain so much confidence that they look forward to the discoveries their writing can reveal about themselves.
