Inspired by the deconstruction art movement that dared to challenge the constricting rules of modernism, the deconstructed journal dares to do away with the traditional spine. This unique ""exposed"" binding allows the journal to open flat a full 180 degrees enabling you to utilize the entire page. Like a comfortable pair of jeans, the rough canvas cover is soft to the touch and weathered on the edges. Unlike a pair of jeans, the cover is direct off-set printed in vibrant colors that showcase artwork from some of America's most talented young artists. Deconstructed journals have 192 lined pages with stylish rounded corners and colorful artistic accents. ABOUT THE ARTIST: Chalkboard artist and typographer Valerie McKeehan has been hand-lettering and illustrating since childhood. A lifelong creative, her passion for commercial art began simply and without pretense: producing hand-lettered signs for her father's business. Whimsical and undeniably handcrafted, her designs are honest and authentic, at home with their imperfections and unique character. Working out of her home studio in Central Pennsylvania at a desk constructed by her husband, she lovingly creates each design entirely by hand, from sketch to slate, illustrating quotations by great authors and public figures or simply depicting everyday subjects that inspire her work (like coffee and cooking).
